

Jody R. Rogers, Ph.D., FACHE

Dr. Jody R. Rogers is a Professor in the Graduate Program in Healthcare Administration at Trinity University in San Antonio, Texas and a former Professor at Baylor University. He is a Board Certified Healthcare Executive, a Fellow in the American College of Healthcare Executives and has over 40 years of healthcare experience. Dr. Rogers has a Bachelors of Science in Medical Technology and Biology, a Masters Degree in Business Administration from Boston University and a Masters Degree from the U.S. Army-Baylor University Graduate Program in Health Administration. His Doctorate is in Health Services Research, Policy, and Administration from the University of Minnesota.

Dr. Rogers served for over 23 years in the U. S. Army, retiring in 1999 as the Director of the U.S. Army-Baylor University Graduate Program in Health Administration. Since his retirement, Dr. Rogers teaches leadership, strategic management, and professional development at Trinity University. He also serves as the Program Manager, Executive Skills Branch of the Leader Training Center, Army Medical Department (AMEDD) Center and School. Dr. Rogers is a faculty member with the American College of Healthcare Executives speaking nationally and internationally on the subject of leadership in healthcare. He has recently been designated as a Certified Master Facilitator for The Leadership Challenge, an industry leading book on Evidence Based Leadership.

Dr. Rogers' primary expertise is working with aspiring leaders from all industries to discover their personal leadership skills. Self-awareness is a critical aspect of leader development. He uses his passion for leader development and his servant-based leadership style to encourage leaders to explore why they want to lead. Leaders who clearly understand the why of leadership are more inspirational and engender greater loyalty among colleagues.

Developing LEADERS people WANT to follow!