LEVERAGING LEADERSHIP ACROSS GENERATIONS

PROGRAM
“The future ain’t what it used to be.”
— Yogi Berra

These immortal words have never been more true than today. There are no guarantees for continuing success. Tomorrow is a much different place. Today, leaders must step up to a different and much broader role.

Are you preparing your leaders to take on tomorrow’s tough, new challenges?

It’s time to grasp the future by instilling stronger leadership in all areas of your organization. International Leadership Associates (ILA) has been building strong leaders for over two decades—individually, in teams, and across organizations. We can do the same for you.
Dear Friends,

Welcome to Chicago for two days of conversation that we hope will enlighten, challenge, and reinvigorate all of our work.

To those who were with us last year in Denver, welcome back! For those who are attending for the first time, the intention of this gathering is to bring together individuals from businesses, educational institutions, government agencies, nonprofit organizations, healthcare agencies, consulting firms, and anyone else using The Leadership Challenge and The Leadership Practices Inventory (LPI) in exciting ways to learn from and support one another. Whether you are new to The Leadership Challenge or a veteran of many years, we hope you will approach the time we have here together as we do—as both teacher and learner. There is a wealth of experience and talent on hand, and we all share the common goal of developing today’s and tomorrow’s leaders.

Current economic circumstances make this Forum an even more valuable opportunity to collaborate, innovate, and support one another. During difficult times such as these, we are likely to see some of the best leadership in decades emerge through the chaos. We will need to remind ourselves and others to look beyond the pessimistic predictions, the fads, and the simplistic solutions to what’s proven and what’s real. The evidence tells us that exemplary leaders get extraordinary things done under adverse and challenging conditions. It also tells us that leadership is not the job of a chosen few. The conference theme will help us focus on developing leaders across all generations and management levels within our organizations. Because when leadership is everyone’s business, we can find new ways to do more with less while also restoring the confidence in and vitality of our organizations.

We feel very fortunate indeed to spend this time with you and thank you for all that you do.

Sincerely,

Jim Kouzes and Barry Posner
Authors, The Leadership Challenge

Over the last year, Barry Posner has been working with his coauthor Jim Kouzes on a new book that delves into some of the enduring truths about leadership—lessons that can be applied across the generations. In this session, Barry will review some of the LPI data which demonstrates that age, among a host of other individual and organizational variables, doesn’t explain much about why some leaders are more effective than others. After twenty-five years, the frequency of The Five Practices still remain a more accurate predictor of leadership success than whether or not you are part of the Traditionalist, Baby Boomer, Generation X, or Millennial generations. What Jim and Barry have re-discovered is that while context matters, process rules, and that there are some meta truths about being a leader, leading others, and developing leaders... at any age, in any place, and at all times.

10:00–11:00 Concurrent Sessions

Renaissance Ballroom A

To Learn, To Lead, To Serve: Truly Engaging Students in The Five Practices of Exemplary Leadership®. This session will share the uses of the Five Practices of Exemplary Leadership and Student Leaders Practices Inventory (Student LPI) in the leadership education and development of college students. The motto of University of Central Florida’s premier leadership program is to learn, to lead, to serve. We work The Five Practices into each of these constructs in our approach to leadership education. Our leadership development activities range from introductory and advanced leadership courses to off-class experiences where young leaders engage in leadership roles, service, and other educational activities. The session will also present assessment and evaluation techniques as they relate to the use of the Student LPI over time.

(Different Places, Different Approaches)

Gary Morgan is Director of Student Leadership Development at the University of Central Florida. He has worked in higher education for 25 years in multiple capacities within student and academic affairs at several colleges and universities. His current work is in student leadership development, the foundation of which is a selective two-year program for 600 students and a new undergraduate certificate and minor in leadership studies.

Renaissance Ballroom B

Evidence-Based Leadership Development. Great workshops are only a piece of a successful leadership development initiative. This session will share how St. Vincent Hospital used The Leadership Challenge to create competitive advantage in the midst of the nation’s third largest competitive healthcare market. Focusing on the metrics and results of the process used to sustain and support leadership development, the presentation will include the selection criteria that led to the adoption of The Leadership Challenge, the process used to engage senior leaders, and an overview of the key implementation and measurement steps. (Different Places, Different Approaches)

Lu Pennal is an associate at St. Vincent Hospital in Indianapolis, Indiana, where she assists with non-clinical organizational training. Kim Chesky is a Leadership Challenge Master Facilitator. He has helped organizations of all sizes from Fortune 50 clients to small businesses and nonprofits achieve extraordinary results.

Renaissance Ballroom C

The Quest to Provide the “Ungovernment Experience”: A Case of Culture Change. Participants will learn how one organization is dramatically shifting its culture! This is the success story currently taking place at the Palm Beach County Tax Collector’s Office. The Leadership Practices Inventory (LPI), Collaboration, Connection and Coaching, and Leadership Training Programs are helping to reposition the entire culture of this organization. The new vision of providing the “ungovernment experience” no longer includes silos, stifled communication, and traditional management. Using a nautical theme, the Navigation Team became role models holding themselves personally accountable. The Steering Team uses the organizational values (positioned as yacht flags) as a guide for decision-making, further modeling leadership traits to management and crew members. Learn about tough decisions, the culture shift, and changes that truly matter. And the story isn’t over yet… (Different Places, Different Approaches)

Georgette Carroll is currently the Goddess of Excellence and Opportunity at Palm Beach County Tax Collector’s Office responsible for creating an organization of leaders who actively engage in shifting the culture to foster an environment that provides the “Un-government Experience.” Trina Pulliam and Myra Quinn are consultants (Trainnovators) with Trainnovations, a founding member of the Consortium for Organizational Brilliance.

Renaissance Ballroom D

Building and Sustaining Corporate Leader Development Using The Leadership Challenge. With a focus on enhancing every life experience—whether it’s the first day of summer, a romantic dinner, or holiday baking—Nestlé is committed to providing quality brands and products that are essential to good living. In doing so, the Nestlé name has become synonymous with great-tasting, nutritious food and beverage products. With more than 17,000 employees, 20 manufacturing facilities, 5 distribution centers, 12 sales offices across the country, and $8.25 billion in sales, leadership development is a must-have core competency of this dynamic global organization. In this session, learn how The Leadership Challenge and the LPI have been used as building blocks for Nestlé’s corporate leader programs. (Different Places, Different Approaches)

Mark Ronk is the head of leader development for Nestlé USA, part of Nestlé USA. In this role, Mark oversees all leader development learning and experiences for over 6,000 salaried employees.

Attendees will leave this session feeling more connected with the model and the materials (a FREE LPI Individual will be given to all attendees).

Steve Coats is the managing partner of International Leadership Associates. He has over twenty years experience with The Leadership Challenge and is co-author of the book There Is No Box.

Gold Coast

iLEADER: Make Way for the Millennials. In the next ten years, 50 percent of the executive leadership of corporations will retire, leaving a huge gap in leadership. Enter the Millennial Generation. They’ve got the numbers to fill the leadership gap—but are they prepared to take the corner office? With your help and Kouzes and Posner’s The Student Leadership Challenge, they will! This session will bring Leadership Challenge practitioners’ approaches and activities to help Millennials apply The Five Practices of Exemplary Leadership in their “do more, do it better, and do it now” lives. (Apply & Practice)

Ryan Underwood is the founder and Chief Leadership Officer of TRI Leadership Resources where he has specialized in the field of youth development and leadership in the education sector for more than 20 years. Amy Gallimore is Director of Leadership at TRI Leadership Resources. Having spent much of her career in residence life, student activities, and Greek life, Amy was also the Youth Leadership Specialist at the University of Tennessee responsible for 4-H development across the state.

Leadership Learning—From Horse Sense to People Smarts. An overview of an experiential approach to teaching The Leadership Challenge model. In this innovative program that moves from vision to action, horses are both learning partners and teachers in a unique format. The Five Practices are brought to life through a presentation that shows how the one-on-one activities with equines allow participants to supplement their classroom introduction and experience the impact of Modeling the Way and Inspiring a Shared Vision to bring goals to life, challenging their perspectives and The Process, and demonstrating how change happens when you Enable Others to Act and Encourage the Heart. (Different Places, Different Approaches)

Nancy Lowery founded The Natural Leader in 2004. A chance meeting with Fred Jacques in 2006 led to the development of “Leadership: From Horse Sense to People Smarts.” Nancy blends a lifetime of experience with horses with over 15 years of corporate experience managing programs for clients such as Mercedes Benz, Procter & Gamble, and Nokia. Fred Jacques, PhD, has designed and delivered programs on all facets of leadership development from the individual to the executive level.

Cultivating a Culture of Leadership Across the University. This session will share the story of St. Catherine’s University, whose mission focuses on educating students to lead and influence. We have cultivated a culture of leadership across the university, borne of this mission, and based on The Five Practices of Exemplary Leadership. Participants will learn how we assessed progress on our Leadership Statement; what we have discovered about how leadership learning occurs institution-wide, in both curricular and co-curricular settings; how we involve a range of participants (students, staff, faculty, administration, and community partners); and where we have identified gaps for development and our vision for the future. (Different Places, Different Approaches)

Rebecca K. Hawthorne directs the Master of Arts in Organizational Leadership Program at St. Catherine University, teaches graduate-level courses in research and is currently conducting research on women’s corporate leadership in Minnesota as part of a national study of women corporate directors and executive officers.

4:30–5:45 Keynote Address
Leading in Turbulent Times, Jim Kouzes
Grand Ballroom

Leaders do their best when the times are the worst. As surprising as this may sound, that’s exactly what Jim and Barry learned when they began their leadership research in the early 1980s. Leaders, it turns out, don’t do their best when they’re maintaining the status quo or when they feel comfortable. They do their best when faced with adversity, crisis, setbacks, and great difficulty. Challenge is the opportunity for greatness. This is just one of the “enduring leadership truths” that emerges from an examination of over 25 years of leadership research. At times like these, it’s critically important to remind ourselves of what the evidence tells about how leaders get extraordinary things done. In this keynote session, Jim Kouzes will offer a set of evidence-based prescriptions on what leaders can do to fully engage the talent and energy of constituents in times of great adversity.
In 1992, at the age of 26, John Hope Bryant was running a successful financial services firm when the Los Angeles riots broke out. After the violence and chaos subsided, Bryant saw that his community needed a “hand up, not a hand out,” so he founded Operation HOPE, an organization dedicated to helping low-wealth communities attain financial literacy empowerment and today, one of the most impressive antipoverty organizations in the country. And he did this by breaking away from the long-standing leadership style based on fear and instead embraced an unlikely ingredient for leadership success: love.

In this session, Bryant will discuss some of the key themes from his newly released book, Love Leadership, themes that will help us reframe the leadership debate so that we learn to lead without fear while prospering at the very same time.

See one. Do one. Teach one: Transforming Physician Leadership Training. The healthcare system faces many challenges that require effective physician leaders. Unfortunately, medical education provides very little leadership training whether in medical school or residency. This session will demonstrate the application of The Leadership Challenge principles in physician training. Using role play, attendees will explore a variety of common and challenging problems through the lens of different healthcare team members. The session will conclude with group discussion on working and leading a multidisciplinary team and how the five practices of exemplary leadership can be utilized. Techniques can be adapted for other healthcare leaders. (Different Places, Different Approaches)

Coaching Leaders: A Blended Solution for Keeping Learning Alive. This session goes beyond the theoretical and outlines a coaching approach that works in the intensely busy world of the leader. Using real life stories and experiences from real leaders, this interactive and engaging session will address the gap between workshop and integration of learning and practice. Participants will walk away with a thoughtful understanding of a coaching model that begins in the workshop to reframe and translate the LPI data into actionable steps and deliberate practice for the leader. Leader as Storyteller, Story as Vision: Using The Offsite as a Learning Tool. Exemplary leadership can be defined as a leader’s ability to create and communicate direction. A deep relationship is necessary to create commitment rather than compliance. This session focuses on the authentic communication that inspires others to take action toward the accomplishment of meaningful goals. It introduces participants to the power of storytelling and shares the veracity of the well-told story in today’s business environment. (Different Places, Different Approaches)

Robert H. Thompson is the author of The Offsite: A Leadership Challenge Fable and a Founding Master Facilitator for The Leadership Challenge. He has worked with the TLC material for more than 15 years. Kathryn Manzer-Matsuo is Chief, Office of Employee Wellness, Human Resources, California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR). Angie Chaplin is Professor, Strategic Communication and Leadership, Seton Hall University.

Leadership and Hope in Times of Change. This timely session will focus on the experience of bringing The Leadership Challenge to a community where thousands of workers have lost their jobs and demonstrate that “leadership is everyone’s business.” The session will present how the model has been used to invite people to view their situation from a perspective of opportunity, a chance to explore where and how they will deal with change. Examples will include not only people who have lost their jobs, but the companies and service agencies that had to decide how they would provide a way through a very troubling time. Participants will be invited to share their own experience of using The Leadership Challenge model when dealing with change in this session, and during the subsequent “Dialogue and Connect” session. (Different Places, Different Approaches)

The Phenomenon of Momentum: Leading Up With The Five Practices. As executives, consultants and business owners strategize ways to lead their organizations successfully in the current economic climate, opportunities abound for individuals to lead. This session explores a phenomenon that occurs when managers and supervisors become more enthusiastic and skilled in The Five Practices than the executive team. They begin to challenge the executive team to demonstrate their commitment which accelerates the integration of the Five Practices into the organization. This phenomenon clearly demonstrates anyone can be a leader in moving an organization forward. (Dialogue & Connect)

Liz Cloud seeks to facilitate learning about the human side of leadership and business. Jackalyn Rainosek enjoys opportunities to share leadership experiences and learning. Both are passionate in helping individuals, teams and organizations discover the power of leadership.

High Touch and High Tech: The Five Practices in Online Leadership Education. Seton Hall University’s online master of arts in strategic communication and leadership (MASCL) program brings together high-touch and high-tech for students seeking a blended learning approach. Exposure to The Leadership Challenge begins with on-campus residency and continues during 12 weeks of online instruction. Led by a certified facilitator in The Leadership Challenge, an online threaded discussion debriefs students on the LPI and leadership development plan, which are repeated 18 months later. This session will describe MASCL’s model for online leadership education and examine quantitative data that measures impact of learning between students’ first and second LPIs. (Different Places, Different Approaches)

Angie Chaplin, MA, CPBA, is a certified facilitator for The Leadership Challenge Workshop. A nationally respected consultant and facilitator with Lutheran Services in Iowa’s Center for Learning & Leading, Angie also teaches The Leadership Challenge for Seton Hall University’s master of arts in strategic communication and leadership.

Using The Five Practices as an Intervention Tool. Organizations are often struggling to change their cultures. This session will follow two different organizations’ struggles to make such shifts using the Five Practices as the fundamental underpinning of their initiatives. One organization has quickly adopted the practices and one has not. This session will talk about both the success and problems faced when facilitating and coaching an organization to cultural change. Specific “stories” will be used to highlight the realities most organizations face in such interventions. Several models will be presented to demonstrate the intentionality of the change approach and specific examples will be cited identifying outcomes. (Different Places, Different Approaches)

Donna Goss and Don Robertson are the Co-Directors of the Leadership Development Institute. They both have over 25 years of business experience and have been consulting the last 8 years to build leadership capability and support change initiatives in numerous organizations, both for-profit and not-for-profit.

Podcasting Your Stories: How to Tell an Encouraging Story When Nobody’s Around. We know how impactful an encouraging story can be. They can make people feel connected, inspired, recognized. The more exposure a story gets, the greater the impact. Taking advantage of Web 2.0 channels such as podcasting can help launch and disperse compelling stories, but it’s not so easy. How do you make your stories compelling when you’re just speaking into a microphone or a phone, with no audience? This session will examine stories delivered in this medium and create guidelines about what works and what doesn’t. You’ll have a chance to hear stories and if you’re feeling adventurous to share your own and receive feedback from others. (Apply & Practice)

Beth High is a Master Facilitator of The Leadership Challenge. She is also the author of the Leadercast Series and contributor to the upcoming book The Challenge Continues with a chapter on The Five Practices in the Virtual Environment. She hosts the blog OnLeadershipOnline which serves as a forum and incubator on the evolving topic of leading in virtual channels.

The Leadership Café: Using Dialogue to Deepen Understanding of The Leadership Challenge. How can you use the practice of dialogue to make the most of training time with participants from all different backgrounds or levels of an organization? World Café is easy to translate to leadership development, it’s a great way to include all voices in the conversation, and it creates deeper connections between participants that they will use long after the training is over. In this session you’ll participate in a brief World Café dialogue about your own personal experiences of leadership. At the café, participants will learn the basics of hosting a leadership dialogue process which includes setting the scene, dialogue logistics, and some example leadership questions to explore with a group.
